Domo-overwhelmingly defeated the next year, and they enough to satisfy a party that they do not repre-cout the State. If it does not satisfy them, it will satisfy the rest of mankind. But the organ here suggests that they were besten by frauds.

This shows the sympathies of the organ—to reto make Kansas a slave State. The Know-Nothwitness (O'Neil) testifies that he knows the tiowbenefit of the Black Republican party! It is a Southern sectional party; adding their testimony shore and the collision actually took place within miserable laisehood and slander, put forward by a rejected and disappointed party. by is sure of "a quarter."

When our editor visits the city, his first call is at the effices of the dailies of his party, where he berts the power. In Onio, two years or so ago, the faithful were all together. They had three horrors ou hand: foreigners, the Pope, and slavery. They gathered themselves together, swere their caths, and learned the signs, winks and blinks, and off they started with the yell ou these birns to such huge proportions that it overshadowed the others. They do not swore the oaths, and had not learned the signs, winks and not swore the oaths, and had not learned the signs, winks and not swore the oaths, and had not learned the signs, winks and not swore the oaths, and had not learned the signs, winks and not swore the oaths, and had not learned the signs, winks and not swore the oaths, and had not learned the signs, winks and not swore the oaths, and had not learned the signs, winks and not swore the oaths, and had not learned the signs, winks and not swore the oaths, and had not learned the signs, winks and not swore the oaths, and had not learned the signs, winks and not swore the oaths, and had not learned the signs, winks and not swore the oaths, and had not learned the signs, winks and not swore the oaths, and had not learned the signs, winks and not swore the oaths, and had not learned the signs, winks and not swore the oaths, and had not learned the signs, winks and himself to swore the oaths, and had not learned the signs, winks and himself to swore the oaths, and had not learned the signs, winks and himself to swore the oaths, and had not learned the signs, winks and himself to swore the oaths, and silve of the wrong in what may be on the right or the wrong in what usy be oathers to mend the signs, winks and the six or of the swore the treats the mod call the oath to ask the usages of the the view of the wrong in what two plants is sue, in which the call usages in the tright or the wrong in what two some into ask the usages of the view plants in the call usages.

In the course of bleeding Kaness, and poor, much abneed Summer.

They took same fereigners in hand, taught them to shrick in approved style. This did vory well as long as definite action was not required. But the brethren have got together in their State Legislatures, and the three horrors come in for their sparse of attention. Now what is to be the ready of the opposition is party it successful, he either the opposition is party it successful, he either visits Washington in person, or bores the principal men of his party with letters, begging office for his friends and government advertising for hiders, st public anction, st the building known as the brethren have got together in their State legislatures, and the three horrors come in for their sparse of attention. Now what is to be the ready elected dignitary to chake him of, for their share of attention. Now what is to be done? The Backeye Legislature is sorely passible just now. A proposition is made to forbid the State courts from naturalizing foreigners; just as some States have forbidden State offices having anything to do with the execution of the fugitive slave law. They propose, moreover, that a foreigner shall not vote until he has resided in the State in months after naturalization. There is Sam; he has a horror of slavery too; thudders and christs at slavery some, but the other horrors must have due attention, and he is determined, whilst he is willing to chake in his society, he accurately located difficulty. leans to Louisville, and at the point of meeting came in contact, which resulted in the sinking of the Lewis, and a loss of ten lives by drowning.

The Ohio river, at the point this collision took place, puching uear half a mile wide, and makes a send some four or five miles above where the heart came to reacher. eide; yet is not so took seeing each other at some or ascending bost from seeing each other at some thing near a mile distant, if suitable lookonts are kept on board. The stage of the river was also such that sither of the bosts could have run also such that sither of the bosts could have run fifty feet of the shore for some distance, an instance illustrating what we have said occurred in this city one morning last week. An excess Messenger having among his freight, in

The testimony furnished by Patterson is, that the Lewis was proceeding on her way, pointed diand near the middle of the river, when the Howard was first seen; that when so seen, the Howard publicans may allege that they prefer vacant seats in the Senate of the Uniter States, to having according to manifest destiny.

They may try in Onio to shrick over all was running up the Indiana shore One witness, publicans may allege that they prefer vacant seats the horrors at once; but then they will explode James Patterson, at the desting according to manifest destiny. out towards the side of the Lawis, and while so The factions in the late canvass were very the Haward, sounded her whistle once, and at the much cheated, and they are very angry about it. | moment of time the whistle of the Howard sound-The Democrats North, all the while, were anxious ed, the engines of the Lawis were stopped and so bask. Another witness (Lynch) states the whis people to make Know-Nothings of; for they to be a steamer, they were about 400 yards apart, and, at the same moment of time sho was soon, his whistle sounded once, as showing her intention of keeping to the right or Kentucky shore; that she was not answered promptly by the Lewis, nor until he boats had approached within 100 or 150 yards of each other, and then by a change of sig nals, when it was too late to change positions. That had her answer been promptly given, though changed, and allowed the Howard time to have straightened up, no collision could have ensued, though he also believes thore would have been time for the Lewis to have gone to the right in-stend of the loft, as the signal of the Haward firs indicated, unless the Lewis had been steering for

> What we consider wrong on the part of these pilote, and led to the disastrons result, is this: First, in regard to Patterson, who, as well as hi-partner, testifies that they saw the light of the Howard at least one mile off. The latter clause of Rule 21, of pilots regulations, is imperative and greads thus: "But in easo the pilot of the ascending boat fails to make the signal in proper time, the pilot of the dessending boat shall make the signal, and the other shall answer promptly." Strong necessity existed for the observan e of thi-rule here; the lights of a bost had been seen, and was exceedingly improper to wait until the Roward approached within 100 or 150 yards of the Lewis, and no signals made by either party And again, although the testimony for Patterso goes to show that the Lewis was in the main channel of the river, and near the middle of the river, still there is room to doubt this, and come to an opposite conclusion, no so much because it is stances that govern and obtain prominence in the case. One of us having visited the Lewis as she strengthened by the Lewis lying so close to short as the did; and her boing thus close to shore, and running round a point, may nave prevented Wood seeing her as soon as he should have done. Cer tain it is the Lewis should have begun to wear off towards the Indiana shore, for the main channel of the river pretty close to where this collision occurred. The foregoing reasons, and the fact o not stopping the engines of the Lewis, as Rule 2 requires, before the boats were so close together as testified to by the engineer on watch (McFar land), does, in our opinion, affix strong and glar-ing culp-bility upon Alex. C. Patterson, pilot of the Kentucky shore.

In regard to Wood, pilot of the Howard, we have imposed the same penalty as upon Patterson because we believe it was entirely in his power to have averted the dieaster, though it might have operated against some of his preconceived notionright. For at the time he blew his whistle s the distance from the Indiana shore, or one third from the Kentucky shore, at which he claims to have been running when his whistle sounded ad he have stopped his engines and dropped int soore, as he could easily have done, and coun ed his whistle again, and again, as required by Rul-21, when not answered promptly, which he has proven was not the ease, no collision could or would, in our epinion, have happene !. ing in this respect, have we suspended his liceuse

In requiring that both these pilots should be relicensed before being allowed to pilot steamer again, we do not intend to reflect on their profes cional skill; but as a great wrong has been com-mitted by both of them, fatal in its consequences to ten persons, who were thus hurried to an un timely end without a moment's warning, the cir cumstances attending the act should be well and maturely weighed before entrusting them again in a like responsible position.

As to the pilot Patterson, he is but young it the business, and a little more experience would probably do him uo harm; for it is not improbabl-that, had he had the nerve that a longer acquaint ance with piloting would most likely have given, and auswared Wood's signal promptly, instead of changing them, and made suitable efforts to have gone to the right, the collision might have been avoided, or at least rendered much less disastrous. The character and standing of Wood as a pilotopic character. and as a man has heretofore been good and unexceptionable, as far as we know; but it does appear to ns, in this instance, he has failed to show that

Importation of Dead Bodies,

THE EXPRESSMENT AND THE CORPAR. -- Among the thousand serviceable things done by the ex press companies is the convergance of corpses Prior to the establishment of expresses (we won der, now, how the world ever got along without them!), if a husband or son died upon a journey, or while temporarily residing for health or business at a distance from his kindred, and it was desided by his friends to have his body brought home, it was usually done at heavy expense, if the distance exceeded one or two hundred miles. It was the custom, if the way lay overland, to to employ an undertaker, who would start out in a covered wagon, establish relays, and travel night and day until the task was done. What is now and any until the case was done. What is not secomplished in eight hours by the express would thou occupy the undertaker at least a week; and his pay, if he traveled at night, was rarely less than ten dollars a day, every expense on route in-

At present, the price for conveying a corpee by express, in charge of a Messenger, a distance of 200 or 250 miles upon a regular route, does not exceed thirty dollars. That we believe to be the price between New York and Beston, for in-

The work, however, is not at all popular with expressmen, and the messengers never meet among their freight with one of those wooden cases in which soffias are usually inclosed, without a wish that they were rid of it. Some of them are very notional upon this subject, not from superstition, Express Messenger having among his freight, in the Express Company's car, one of those ominons ly oblong boxes, declared confidentially to the ondnotor of the train, that the body inside must be very far gone indeed," and "the smell f it made him sick as a horse." In vain he tried o forget it, or salubrify the odor by smoking a nagnificent cigar. The smell became more olfousive to him every minute during the long night that he was whitzing away with it over the rati-track; and before the train arrived in New York, it affected him so much that he vomited.

When the drivers, with the wagens of the New York effice, went to the depot for the express ireight, the illness of the unfortunate messenger was obvious, and in answer to inquiries he sx-plained the cacse. All eyes fell on the oblong box end every man hold his nose. It was decided. manimously, that it was to far gone to be taken to the office, and as the railroad men swore through their compressed olfactories) that they could not suffer it to remain in the depot, the trougest-nerved and most accommodating driver present took it to the "dead-house," up-lown.
No one knew who the obnoxions box came from.
It was usual to make a special bargain in such aces, but no allusion was made to it on the way In the course of the day, however, the mystery was solved. A centleman came into the ex press office, in Broadway, and called for the box "It has been taken to the dead-house," was the eply of the clerk.
"The dead-house!" exclaimed the applicant.

"Yes, sir," rejoined the clerk firmly, "we couldn't stand it, sir Too far gone, sir."
"Too far gone?" was the augry retort. "I should bink so, if yon have sont it up to -th street.

Explain yoursell? what do you mean?"

"I mean that the body smelt too bad, sir!" iter-ted the clerk.

"Smelt bad!" oried the visitor: "I have handled for ten years past, and I never smelt anything ut the varnish, and that not unpleasantly. Hang t, sir, that box contains my Manikin, an artificial matomy or model of the human body. I am Dr. violing, the lecturer upon physiology."

This ridiculous coclaircisement produced an explosion of laughter throughout the office, and it s still the best joke of the season. It is a capital illustration of the power of the imagination.

And That Was I. BY PROFESSOR HAILMAN.

On a high mountain's peak I dreamt of late That walking in the morn, I saw a maid So mild, so sweet—it must be you, though? I. Before her, on his kness, a youth I spied, Whom gently to her throbbing heart she tied, And that was I. But soon the scene had changed; in a dark wave

The lovely malden strnggled with her grave; Her feeble strength each moment seemed to 17. When to her help there same a youth in haste, Leaped in, and drew her from the watery waste-Thos in various ways I dreamt the dream.

And every where love would trlumphant beam; All seemed round you, and you round all to ay. You before in nurestricied freedom flew, The youth in silence followed, faithful, trus-And when at last I from my dresm awoke.

The new day brought new longing as it broke; Your dear and lovely form was always by; I saw you warming by his glowing kiss, I saw you in his arms enjoy the bliss, And he was I.

At last, on woary life's still wearler path You met me friendly, with angelle grace. And deep hot longing made me frat and sigh. Did you not see the youth's elated look When his fond heart in blissful rapture shook? That y nih was I.

You raised mo to a higher sphere of life; In you unit-s the whole strength of my strife, And all my fundest wishes in you lie. If ever man your heart should bear away. Might I but then in trinmph boast and say, Yes, that was I. Louisvi.Le, Jan. 8, 1857.

"At Cost," OUT," and similar clap brap words, meet our cyc at store extrances and windows, in show-cases, and in circulars and newspapers everywhere, and on it occasions. There being not a particle of mercattle phiosophy in seeing without prout, the observer may hautraily ass what these phrases mean. Are facienasts becoming so exceedingly charitable ann humans as to vie with each other in supplying the wants of the commentity gratuitously? In explanation, three rea cust can be given, viz: bealers either i. tenn to quit business, wast to get rid of old stock, or else their receipts are so light as to make it imperative to reice their receipts are so light as to make it imperative to reice them to be supplied. A fourth reason has been given, but has little loundation in lact, viz: Gettiemen may have make profit crows. This is possible, but not very ptobable—not even in the JEWELRY BUSINESS.

Though well aware of the good old adage, "Live and it fire," wish to remind the public, and their friends in paracular, that they subsessibly ear, on the
